I admire the PM for his desire to find a place in our history books. But when we want to do many things, sometimes, we see people who block us along the way as unnecessary, to be knocked out of the way.

PRAKASH JAVADEKAR: Why has the BJP not been successful in its political campaigns in this general election?

It is true that we have not been able to connect with the masses through our political campaigns. One reason could be that the current government is more focused on issues like national security, which is a valid concern. However, it is important to note that the BJP has always been successful in connecting with the masses through its social media campaigns.

IDEA EXPANSE: Job creation has been a challenge. What are the steps being taken to address this issue?

The government has taken several steps to address the issue of job creation. These include the implementation of various schemes such as the Prime Minister’s Employment Urban Guarantee Scheme (PMEGPS), the Mahatma Gandhi National Rural Employment Guarantee Scheme (MGNREGS), and the Udyam Yojana.

FATHER: How can I help my child with homework?

It is important to create a conducive environment for learning. Encourage your child to read and practice regularly. Set a routine and keep track of their progress. Provide feedback and motivation.

NAHAS FORBES: A leading voice in India's corporate sector, Forbes clarifies his position on the current business-government relations. As co-chairman of Forbes, he discusses the challenges and opportunities of an implemented “affirmative action” policies in his companies—many of which are highly ranked amongst the “Great Places to Work.”

SOUTH ASIA DEVELOPMENT: This is a discussion on political parties in South Asia. It is important to understand the political landscape of the region and how it affects the lives of its citizens.
The tide of dissatisfaction is rising in the country. It is not just a result of the pandemic and economic challenges, but also of a growing sense of frustration and despair among people. The government's handling of the pandemic, the economic policies, and the overall governance have left many feeling disenchanted. The recent protests and demonstrations reflect a deep-seated discontent with the current political and economic situation.

The situation is particularly acute in the urban areas, where the cost of living has escalated, and job opportunities are scarce. The rural areas are also affected, with the pandemic disrupting farming and other agricultural activities. The lack of proper healthcare facilities and access to education is another major source of concern.

The government needs to take urgent steps to address these issues. It must work towards creating more job opportunities, especially for the youth. It should also focus on improving the healthcare system, especially in rural areas. Education is another area that requires urgent attention. The government must ensure that all children have access to quality education.

The government must also work towards building a more inclusive and equitable society. It should address the issues of poverty and inequality, which are major challenges facing the country. The government must work towards creating a more just and equitable society, where everyone has equal opportunities to succeed.

In conclusion, the situation is serious, and the government must act quickly to address the issues. The people of the country are looking for leadership that can provide solutions and create a better future for all. The government must rise to the occasion and work towards building a more just and prosperous country.